Diana Hyde is an Associate Director and joins us from Stanford University. Prior to Stanford, she was Executive Director of Minds Matter of New York, a nonprofit that serves high-achieving, low-income high school students. Diana's previous work includes serving for eight years as a Relationship Manager and Lender at various private banking institutions and as a Program Director for the Posse Foundation. She has her Master's Degree in Policy, Organization and Leadership studies from Stanford University and her B.A. in Economics from Trinity College. In her spare time, she has been involved with Minds Matter since 2001 and has served on the New York City Board, Co-Directed the Senior Program and Co-headed leadership recruitment for the Executive Committee of Minds Matter. Originally from Kansas City, she is an avid Jayhawks fan. She enjoys running, cooking and traveling.
