The Stern School of Business, EMT Program, is offering an advanced class in Independent Film/Cinema to be taught in conjunction with the 2019 Tribeca Film Festival (TFF). This will take place during Spring 2019 through and including the TFF which takes place April 25 – May 05, 2019.

The course will include four classes at Stern, on Thursdays from 4:55 p.m. to 6:10 p.m., with specific dates to be announced at a later time.

This course is possible through a partnership with the Tribeca Film Festival Board and its founders. The course will include:
1. An opening lecture from one of the board members or founders of TFF.
2. An exclusive, non-transferable festival pass for seeing as many movies as possible on the schedule.
3. Attendance to most panels where they have not set special guest reserved seating.

You will have an opportunity to ask questions of producers, directors, financiers, studio executives, cinematographers, and many senior executives attached to the business. Both during the day and in the evenings there will be continuous screenings of selected International and American films, primarily independents. For more information about the festival, visit www.tribecafilmfestival.org.

Only 25 students will be able to register. In order to be considered for a place in this course, we must receive an essay describing the reason for your interest in the course (answering the questions below) along with your resume showing your internships and any relevant experience by 5pm on October 19, 2018.
